MILLIONS OF People IN ACONY.

PHYSICIANS CORNERED.

I suppose there is not in the whole of mankind's experience anything a human sufferer will catch at more greedily and pity to such an extent as to interrupt the exercising pains of a poor mortal suffering from that fearful disease—Dyspepsia. Reverters there has been another able virtually of opinion among medical men, as to the true character of this disease. Some leading as an infirmity of the stomach, others as a disease, and others viewing it as a result of some disease, but it is now generally admitted to be a disease arising from a disordered condition of the blood, and further it is admitted that rheumatism can never be thoroughly cured without exterminating such poisonous matters from the blood by a reliable internal remedy. We feel confident that none will feel better satisfied and relieved more than the consistent physician who shall find that a true cure for this stubborn disease has been discovered. The following testimony from Portland, yesterday cannot fail of satisfy all that the

Diamond Rheumatic Cure

is a wonderful Medical Discovery.

PORTLAND, Dec. 31, 1874.

Prof. Alphonse Rider:

Dear sir: Unsolicited by you, I wish to bear testimony to the efficacy of the Diamond Rheumatic cure. I was prostrated in bed and had been confined to from this common and agonizing affection, rheumatism. My shoulder was so affected that I could not raise my head and I despaired of ever again having the use of that limb. I was induced, by hearing of the many marvellous cures accomplished by the agent while staying at the Preble House, to buy a bottle. It is sufficient to say that without faith in the medicine or its results, by the taking of five small bottles I was entirely relieved and weeks have since elapsed, and I am still all right and free from pain. With a life made miserable and the feeling of new life I appreciate I attribute to the use of the Diamond Rheumatic Cure. Have the kindness to publish this fact and experience around for the benefit of suffering humanity.

Yours truly,

CURTIS HANSCOM, Temple St.

FURTHER PROOF.

CAPE ELIZABETH, Nov. 15, 1874.

Prof. Alphonse Rider:

Dear sir: This is to certify that I have been a confirmed sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism for the past three years, and during the last year my sufferings have been beyond description. I became nearly crippled. I could hear of Put Obtained no relief until I tried the "Diamond Rheumatic Cure." It is truly a wonderful remedy. Respectfully yours,

AMANDA M. BROWN.

"OLD AGE NEVER COOLS THE DOUGLAS BLOOD."

A little incident occurred on a horse-car the other afternoon that deserves the immortality of the types.

A number of our oldest citizens, such as John Neal, Judge Howard, T. C. Hersey and others, were riding up home in the horse-car, about 6 p. m., as is their wont, when two young roughs, perhaps twenty-two or three years of age, jumped on to the front platform of the car, one of them puffing away at a villainous cigar. The front door was open and the clouds of smoke rolled in, almost choking the occupants. At last one of the older gentlemen could stand it no longer, and so remarked, at which one of the others touched the smoker, saying that the smoke was very offensive and it as the rules of the company did no permit smoking on the cars. To this appeal the man paid no more attention than if he had been a statue. Mr. John Neal, leaning forward, remarked as follows:

"Young man, that smoke is very offensive and you must put out that cigar."

"I say, old man?" replied the rough, lazily looking over his shoulder at Mr. Neal, without removing the cigar from his mouth.

The color in the old gentleman's face rose second by, but repressing his wrath, he again remarked, "Young man, that cigar must be put out. Smoking is not allowed on the cars."

"Well, old man, what are you going to do about it?" replied the rough.

With the quickness of lightning Mr. Neal made a step and on to the platform. Quicker than it takes to tell the story he seized the cigar from the man's mouth, and flung it in the street. With one hand he grasped the rough by the nape of the neck and with the other by the left fore-arm, raised him off his seat and dashed him to the platform, and as he placed his foot on him he exclaimed, in quivering tones, "Thank your stars, young man, I did not pitch you into the street after your cigar."

The fellow was completely cowed. What we consider that Mr. Neal is 34 years old the more physical energy and power displayed was something remarkable. Every one will say he served the rough just right.

TWEEDLE-DUM AND TWEEDLE-DEE.

[From the Evening Journal]

Governor Tilden of New York has annexed the President and taken up his summer residence at Long Branch as his predecessor Gov Hoffman did at Newport And very sensible it was in both of them We have not noticed as the Republican papers very complaint that Gov Tilden has a month left the Capital, but gone out of the State He is within an hour of his jurisdiction and can return at the summons of the telegraph for the performance of any needed executive act But we have seen very natural comments on the wails and assaults which the papers recently to Gov Tilden have made on the President for going to the same place although he does not go without the President and no temperate man himself for a moment from the performance of executive acts.

The New York World has gone so far as to accuse the President of a violation of law in leaving the Capital It, in this he has violated the law which the World has not cited and which we think has no more application to him than to all his predecessors at much of the same time The earlier Presidents did not remain at the Capital but if the time in the case of Congress they were absent for months consecutively and could not transact does return to the Capital to attend to business more or other matters that could better be attended to there nor had they the means which the telegraph affords of instantaneous communication

But the virtuous indignation of the World carries itself on the President It has only excused for the Governor What is unpardonable in the one is quite right and altogether proper in the other The World explains that Gov Tilden has been greatly overworked and needs rest and recuperation Moreover much of the business that requires his attention can be transacted just as well at Long Branch as at Albany It would be too much to expect the right of the New York Democracy to see that the same reasoning applies to the President that the Executive of fifty millions of people may be overworked as well as the Executive of two millions, that the President has had some matters to vex him and strain his nerves—all that they are pretty much—if the cases of administration of internal affairs, of foreign complications of the distribution of office of Indian difficulties may weigh upon a man's strength and may make rest and recreation not only a desire but a necessity We do not reckon among these the constant abuse misrepresentation and falsehood of political newspapers, which not content with opposing General Grant's administration attack his private character and with the cowardice of malice assail his defenceless wife and children We do not reckon these, because never reads them and therefore is not in the least affected by them They are not more bitter vindictive and false now than they were on the eve of the last Presidential election, when the people manifested, by their votes, what they thought of them; they are not worse than were the assaults on Washington and the most illustrious of his successors; not one of whom cared less about them, or suffered less by them in the public estimation than General Grant

The President and Governor Tilden have done, in this respect, only what their predecessors have done, what all sensible men would do, and what all reasonable men approve And the Democratic papers have done only what they and their predecessors have always done, abuse and vilify in their opponents, what they justify and praise in their friends, And so the world goes on

A LEAF FROM THE RECORD

[From the Rochester Journal.]

No just comparison can be instituted between the transactions of the Republican party and the parties which have hitherto administered the government Its responsibilities have been of such magnitude, its field of labor so extensive, its history so crowded with great events that its fourteen years of power far outweigh in importance the seventy one years which preceded them. It seems like idle boasting to say that the Republican party throughout the administration of public affairs has borne unsophisticated greater upon all the schedule strictures from 1789 to 1 61.

Yet such is the fact, as the official records clearly indicate. Let us examine these records, and by the comparison of figures obtain a few valuable facts

How stands the record on the question of revenue?

We shall see

The net ordinary revenue of the Government from March 4, 1789, to June 30, 1860, was, according to the official reports of the Treasury Department, $1,606,355,650.53

This is a large amount, but it covers a period of seventy-one years.

From 1860 to June 30, 1874, the period lacking about nine months, for which the Republican party stands responsible, the net ordinary revenue of the government was $4,437,187,785.12, or more than double the net revenue of the preceding seventy-one years Yet the extraordinary expenses necessary to put down the slaveholders' rebellion crowded this vast amount of revenue into the short space of fourteen years

Let us examine the list of expenditures and see how that account stands

The net ordinary expenses of the Government March 4, 1789, to June 30, 1860 were $1,731,734,673 72. From June 30, 1860, to June 30, 1874, a period of fourteen years, the net ordinary expenditures were $3,165 897 922 84, or more than three times the expenditures of the preceding seventy-one years

The gross receipts and expenditures of the government which include the loan transactions show a still greater contrast

The gross receipts from March 4 1789 to June 30, 1860, were $2 180,281 970.55 From June 30, 1860, to June 30, 1874, they were $12,117,694 062 94, or more than five times the total receipts of the previous seventy-one years

The total gross expenditures from March 4 1789 to June 30, 1860, were $2 150,644, 10 18 From June 30 1860, to June 30, 1874 they were $11 965,794 442 21 or more than five times the total gross expenditures of the previous seventy one years, Yet, with this enormous receipts the expenditures made necessary by the suppression of the Democratic slaveholders' rebellion, the records show a degree of official integrity without a parallel in the history of governments Vice-President Wilson, in 1872, in referring to this subject said

"During the war we paid through the Paymaster's Department of the Army more than a thousand million dollars That money was paid sometimes when troops were on their march sometimes when they were under fire and we lost less than a quarter of a million dollars Never in the history of the human family was there any higher evidence of integrity In the war of 1812, in paying out the little money we paid during that war, we lost about two million dollars When General Spinner stood upon his office of Treasurer of the United States $65,000,000 000 have passed through his office, counted by from three to six hundred men and women. We have lost between fifty and sixty thousand dollars in this eleven years, while $65 000,000 000 have gone through the bills."

Taxes have been collected under General Grant's administration, in three years nearly twelve hundred million dollars—nearly four hundred million a year, there has been paid out nearly a thousand million dollars—making about twenty-one hundred million dollars We have lost of this immense sum, in all the departments of the Government, a million and a quarter—less than a fifteenth part of one per centum!

We have paid out during these three years nearly million dollars, in pensions and we have had five defalcations, all of them soldiers, and four of them saved their blood for the country But the Government has not lost a dollar, for the agents made good their accounts, or the bondsmen did it for them "

These remarks are as applicable to-day to when they were uttered

A very careful calculation of losses sustained was embodied in an official letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, in 1872 As equal honesty has been practiced in all the departments since the date of this letter it may be safely taken as a basis for present calculations According to this letter the per cent of losses to the Government in the collection of internal revenue since March 3, 1869 was less than one fourth of one per cent of the amount collected or less than two dollars in ten thousand

In the collection of the customs for the same time the loss was $28,090, out of $503,000 000 or the one hundredth part of one per cent, or less than five dollars in every one hundred thousand

The loss to depositors, through our National banking system, was the one hundred and eighty sixth part of one per cent —equivalent to five dollars and three-eighths in every one hundred thousand

JOURNALISTIC TROUBLES If we were called upon to specify two of the most serious annoyances which beset the journalist in his effort to meet the public demand for news and entertainment we should unhesitatingly mention the urgency of one class of people for the publication of matter of no special interest to the public, and of another in procuring the suppression of news which is legitimate material or publication The editor is frequently besought to avoid all mention of some occurrence which may have become the subject of general comment and the results in nearly every instance that the yielding editor shortly finds the matter set forth in every journal but his own If a serious accident occurs which excites the interest of the community, some friend of the family is a most sure to request on behalf of the relatives that the matter be kept out of the paper and instead of having the public satisfied by accurate information, the parties interested are likely to find the most exaggerated and distorted accounts going the rounds of other papers We are reminded of this topic by our most recent experience in suppressing all reference to a serious attempt at suicide, only to find a report telegraphed abroad in detail and copied into all of our exchanges We were aware of the futility of efforts to keep such a matter out of the newspapers, but deferred to the very earnest request of well-meaning friends; with the anticipated result that the matter is widely published, while our own paper, which was the first to obtain the information, is made to appear almost the only one ignorant of what has transpired in our vicinity. And yet, when the next request is made for the suppression of some fact which is sure to become generally known, we shall have just as much difficulty in seeking to convince the parties that the public will obtain the news from another source, if we fail to give it.

A correspondent of the Portland Press says that only $16,000 of the "Jewett & Pitcher money" was issued, and that but about $10,000 was in circulation in Aroostook. It is also confidently stated that the extension proposed will be granted By the creditors, and that arrangements will be made to redeem the paper at face value at an early day. Parties are offering fifty per cent, but little has changed hands, as those who are able prefer to keep it rather than dispose of it at a discount.

Hon S D Wadsworth, of Minot, has addressed a card to the Portland Advertiser in which he pronounces as "entirely untrue" the statement of that paper that he was nominated for Senator by the Oxford County Republican Convention "on the avowed understanding of his hostility to the second century Big things in the record of Morrill's re-election to the United States Senate." He says it is entirely unexceptionable, and his opinions held freely in the Senate. He says it is entirely unexceptionable, and his opinions held freely in the Senate. He says it is entirely unexceptionable, and his opinions held freely in the Senate.

Trial of Parties to the Mountain Meadow Massacre—A New Verdict

BEAVER July 20. In court this morning, Judge Sutherland, Counsel for Lunn, said he had found a fatal defect in the indictment which he had intended to overlook and go to trial upon it, but finding that Lee's case would be first tried and Dame's not reached this term he asked that the indictment be quashed on the ground that the crime was not alleged to have been committed in this territory or district nor in any county, but simply in Mountain Meadow valley without any other designation, whereupon Mr Carr presented a new indictment which charges Dame, Elliott, W. Wilden Main, C. Stewart, Geo Adair, Jr., John M. Higbee, Isaac C. Haight, Samuel Jukes and Philip Klingan Smith with conspiracy with the Indians to kill those emigrants, and that in pursuance to that conspiracy they did kill them. The indictments will not be made public till to-morrow morning at which time Lee will be arraigned and plead to it.

CHECKS,

IN BOOK FORM OR LOOSE.

"I did it," says Chip. "You did!" says Pop
"How did you know?—you were not asleep."
"I was under manager's orders
Watching for bugs like anything.
When all of a sudden I turned around,
For close beside me I heard a sound—
A little bug, and a little bug.
"Pick-a-de-dee! You'd had a nap.
And while you were only half awake,
Would you ple-ase somewhere break
What's an ankle?" "It don't know.
But after calls a boat is good and slow.
Something that can't as good as steal.
That drops down on you and makes you squeal"
"Well, weather Reporter's mine, I take
And think you didn't come out of an egg"
I tell you I heard the old shell break.
And the first sound came from your coat make.
And Mamma mended, and puffed her breast,
And pushed me further out of the nest,
Just to make room enough for you,
And there your shell—I saw it true
Chip, you set over his shoulder there,
And there it lay by the old gray hen—
Half an egg shell, chipped and brown,
And the size of a ball of yellow down.
Chicks not chippers, and smart and sure,
With the pertest bill and the blackest eye
In a minute, with a little pry,
That is a wonderful piece of work.
Pop, you will/don't you see
That shell isn't nearly as big as me?
Whatever you say, Mag, I declare
I never, never, could get in there?"
"It could," says Pop, "I think it's plain," says Chip,
With that he gave her a horrid nip.
And Pop began to hopse and peck,
And Chip sought out his wings and neck
They practiced, and struck, and capered about,
Their toes turned in and their wings spread out,
As angry as two small chicks could be,
Till off their Docking turned to see
The cook-bird clucked, and called in vain,—
Until they went with might and main,—
Tail at end, the old hen used her beak
And Pop and Chip, with many a squeak,
Appeared off on either side.
With a very funny chip and stride
With its ruffled feathers, and Mother Hen,
When she heard the story told again
Declared as the two legs that have wings,
Are better than four-pounders, and laughed
At the way they fight and talk
For what can worm a mutton stalk,
What's sweet counter I like to know
When you come from, or where you go?
Keep your temper as I earn your food,
I can't see why women fuss a fighting breed
I won't have quarrels—I will have peace
I hate to hear you talk so cross and fierce,
If I peck—but his ear with the yellow rim,
The meanest chicken that ever can sun
And Pop in her feathers curled down in egg,
And sat for herself. But her of an egg

THE LOST WAGER

The trunks were all packed and carried on the cars, bags with a pile up in the corner of the capacious old-fashioned hall. How melancholy they looked, those emblems of parting and adieu. Not even the merry laughter of the two or three young girls who were gathered around a stalwart handsome fellow of twenty-five could entirely banish an unpleasant something or other from the room. Charlie Jack was going away by the general mischief maker to most of the members of the whole family, and Mrs. Chester eating by the distant window wiping his spectacles every five minutes and declared privately that the going of the evening paper was a terrible trial to old eyes.

"Are you ready, girls," said Jack, applying himself vigorously to the refreshments in a most portmanteau. Perhaps one may one day discover that it was such a lunching matter. I think of that loss the family is going to sustain in my excellent self.

"But you'll come back soon Jack dear," coaxed Minnie Chester the prettiest and most roguish of all cousins, and the one who kept up a perfect fire of practical jokes and mischief in the house.

They she sat on the biggest trunk of the collection her brown curls hanging about her round face and her eyes sparkling with a curious mixture of fun and tears.

"I'm not at all sure of that, Miss Minnie," said Jack decisively. "If I succeed in making a location to suit me, I shall probably decide to settle permanently at Thornville and turn Limited proprietor on my own account.

Only imagine our Jack a gentleman of property, Lingual Minnie, speaking to her sisters.

I don't see anything so very ridiculous in the idea," remarked the young man rather piqued at the amusement of his cousins. "At all events, there is one most certain advantage that will result from my departure.

"And what is that Mr Quick—

"The fact that you will have plenty room for us on our homecoming little mates."

Don't be so certain of that Cousin Jack," said Minnie shaking her long curls. "Won't we require I don't believe you'll get a partie trunk on your yet? Ah! I have seated with you for several little pieces of impertinence, but pray don't imagine I've forgotten us."

Minnie's last remark brought the little maiden her eyes dancing with mischief. "But you know I never once thought of sending the letter, I only wanted to read it to Jack when I went down stairs. Well, I opened it with a great flourish of trumpets, and just then who should come in but papa and the strangers. Of course I had—and when I came back the letter was sealed and safe in Jack's pocketbook, and Olive, it was the wrong letter."

It was rather a dim light—and papa's eyes are not as keen as they were won to be and my impertinent missive was gone, while the real legal affair lay there, amongst a heap of discarded papers. And I hadn't courage to confess my misdemeanors, papa is so opposed to my innocent little jokes—and Jack is off with that indiscernible letter. I shall certainly win the sleeve buttons, Olive, but what a torn-ado there will be, when my mischief leaks out."

And Minnie looked so bewitchingly lovely in her alternate paroxysms of terror and laughter that Olive, grave old sister though she was, had not the heart to lecture her as roundly as she deserved.

The crimson sunset of the very next evening shone radiantly into the special sanctum of the worthy old Jabez Thorne, of Thornville, Justice of the Peace, and chairman of all the agricultural meetings for ten miles around. It was no scholarly-looking library, for that of his wife's sporting Chester, but a square, light room with four un-curtained windows, and ornamented with numerous black-framed engravings of prize cattle and giant turnips. He was seated in a leather-cushioned armchair, looking over the film of an agricultural journal, to find some concealed information on the subject of "phosphates" and "superphosphates" when a servant brought him a card and a letter.

"The gentleman is in the parlor, sir."

Jabez Thorne laid aside his newspaper, glanced at the card, which bore the simple inscription, "John Lacy"—then at the letter, which purported to be the introductory to that individual.

"How—ha—from my old college chum, Chester, as I live. Remarkable change in his hand-writing, but these alters us all! Haven't heard from him in twenty years and—hallo! what is this? A pretty cool request, upon my word—nephew wants a wife, and has heard that I possess a daughter—has lots of money—wants me to send him with my well-known experience in such matters. What does the rascal mean?" ejaculated Jabez, the fringe of grey hair that surrounded his head literally standing absolutely erect with indignation. "I'll send Jeffers to kick the impudent young scamp out of the house."

But with a moment's reflection came calmness.

"Well, after all, I don't see what there is in the matter to make me go foolishly angry. Guess I'll see what Mary says. An excellent family these Chesters—and this letter is just like Zebedee Chester—he always was singular in his notions. Rather unlike the ordinary method of coming to an understanding on such matters, but there's nothing like a dash of originality in this world and if the boy is rich and Mary don't object—At all events I'll see him on this subject."

And Jabez Thorne thrust the letter into his pocket and upon deliberately into the parlor where young Lacy was quietly awaiting his appearance. The old gentleman's face was scarlet with embarrassment, he was half disposed to be angry with his guest a cool self-possession.

I had thought of settling in this vicinity, Mr. Thorne," said Jack, after the ceremonies of greeting had been exchanged, "and understood from my uncle that you had a desirable piece of property you might be disposed to part with."

"Piece of property" thought the old gentleman, beginning to fire up again, but he controlled his emotion and only answered —"Really sir, this is a very strange request

One can hardly be expected to answer definitely upon so very short notice."

Certainly not, Mr. Thorne. I have no wish to hurry you," said Jack, politely "but I am rather anxious to see for myself, and if you will favor me with a brief description of the prominent features of—"

But Mr Thorne was fidgeting uneasily on his chair

What do you mean sir?" he exclaimed wrathfully.

Jack was rather perplexed at this unwelcome reception, but he answered, as courteously as possible—

"Why, sir, of course it is not best to be too precipitate on a matter of such importance."

A Double Danger Averted.

The inhabitant of a malarious region is threatened by a double danger. He is not only compelled to breathe malaria, but to swallow it, since it assists not only the atmosphere, but the water. The dual poison threatens his system, and unless indigestion be prevented, the liquid through the stomach against this double peril there is but one protection, and that is to invigorate the entire body through the digestive and secretive organs. Ordinary tonics usually fail to accomplish this—Hostetter's Stomach Bitters never. In the tropics, where the diseases originate, by malaria are of the most malignant type than those originated in the same causes in temperate zone, Hostetter's Bitters is constantly receiving testimonials of its efficacy in all of this continent where it is not the regular agent for maintaining the eyes and checking the stomach, liver and bowels, preventing zymic malaria and other causes.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, guardian of Charles B. Stevens, minor heir of Milton Stevens, late of Dixmont in said county, deceased, respectfully represents that said minor is seized and possessed of certain real estate, viz: An undivided one-third part of the following described premises, situated in said Dixmont and bounded as follows: Beginning at the southeast corner of the premises at the road; thence north one hundred and sixty rods; thence west forty rods; thence south one hundred and sixty rods to the road; thence east by said road forty rods to the first bound, containing forty acres, more or less.

That it would be for the benefit of said minor that said real estate should be sold, and the proceeds thereof put out at interest, or otherwise used for his benefit.

She therefore prays that license may be granted her to sell said real estate at public or private sale, according to the requirement of law

LIZZIE H. STEVENS
Guardian.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, administrator of the estate of Levi Lancaster, late of Hartford, in said county, deceased, respectfully represents that the personal estate and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are insufficient to pay the just debts and charges of administration by the sum of two hundred and ninety-nine dollars

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him a license to sell, at public or private sale, and convey all the real estate of which said deceased died seized and possessed, the same being situated to the said town of Hartford, as by a partial sale of any square portion thereof, the proceeds of the envelopes shall be sufficient in value, to satisfy said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration
